tion of natural resources, and the Maritime provinces with a demand for a new sort of subsidism. Most of the Provinces can no longer bear the burden of social services with the limited sources of revenue they possess. The Government is now driven for funds, are ready enough to compromise. Mr. Bennett's strategy therefore is working. He can now tell those citizens who desire a re-orientation of the constitution, that the Liberal premier is proving recalcitrant. He can make an election cry—and he needs one sort of it, and that there may be slightly emboldened by it. Premier Taschereau of Quebec, in the meanwhile, apparently has been keeping his wife about him and has been letting the other provincial governments bear the brunt of objecting to the Bennett proposal.

Development of Tar Sands

Around McMurray, in the northern part of Alberta, there are enormous beds of bituminous sands, which have only waited for the discovery of a simple process for the separating of the hydrocarbons from the sands to become the basis of one

For many years much engineering skill and money have been spent in an endeavor to perfect a simple, efficient process, and just recently, Mr. Max Hall of Denver and his associate Mr. McPherson, have, after many years of effort, evolved what appears to be such a process. There has been no up in Toronto: a pilot plant for the separation of the solids, and within the next two or three

"Berry Creek's Long Trail"

Goodly! long trail and stopping houses—these days to me are gone;
I've abandoned you well then there, with money and some more;
Many a storm I've battled through, in wind and hail, and snow;
And many a little gopher nestled, as along the trail I'd go.

I remember when this trail was long, and mud was sticking thick—
How as poor boys would tread along, with candle 'Tm and 'thick;
We'd noddle at "Honey's" or "Daisy's," Charles' "lame" or at the "Mice"
And many a pleasant time we had selling stoves along the line.

I'm thinking now of Stewart's store, down on the Berry Creek,
Where he can a good stopping house, and to July gave plenties;
I'm thinking now of the old place, where I've been so long—
I'm thinking now of the old place, where I've been so long.

available to the press that a general election was not likely to be held before next June. It is unlikely also that the bye-election in Richmond, resulting from the death of C. G. Lillie, will be held before the general election.

According to press dispatches, it is supposed that if there is any improvement in conditions between now and June, it will react in favor of the government, and it is also suggested as a possibility that an Aberlath plan of Social Credit may divide in interest in the intervening months, thus proving less of a complication to the solidarity of U. F. A. forces.

On Tuesday a letter was handed to us by A. C. McCully, which we publish this week. The writer apparently is riled at certain comments we had made on Social Credit last week, and also in previous issues. We are always glad to have our shortcomings pointed out, and to know what people think of us. This is an Independent paper, and every man has a right to his opinions. We have already printed many columns on Social Credit to show why it is impractical. Suffice it to say that all payments would have to come out of production in Alberta, and it would be the farmer who would be paying the brunt of the sum necessary for the basic dividends.

The Times is being published every week until Xmas. Send in your news items early.
